

Vision for Undergraduate Education

Steeped in Dominican ethos, liberal learning through foundations, breadth, depth, and integration for responsible global citizenship

Dominican ethos

- educating one student at a time in the company of others
- intensive advising and mentoring
- an emerging sense of personal and professional vocation
- care and responsibility for oneself, one's community, and the wider creation
- knowledge about Catholic Christianity and how it interacts with secular and other religious beliefs, practices, and worldviews

Liberal learning

- foundations in communication, computer applications, critical thinking, cultural knowledge, information literacy, quantitative reasoning, reading, and research fundamentals
- areas of study across multiple disciplines
- depth in a major and possible minor
- connecting personal, academic, work, and community experiences
- evaluating and reflecting on one's learning
- experiential learning (e.g., internships, community-based learning, study away, undergraduate research)

The character, knowledge, and skills to take informed, ethical action in the world and to influence others for the good
